Now that you know how to use the Look Around feature, you can see where curiosity leads you. You can use Look Around to take virtual tours of cities and landmarks. And when you come across something interesting, you can add it as a favorite in Apple Maps. The mythological Wild West, that era of cowboys and outlaws like Buffalo Bill and Wyatt Earp, really fit into the period between 1850 and 1920. Of course, the U.S. border went strong long before that, and you're really looking at the expansion westward, which started in the 17th century. This is the period when many of these small legendary cities were founded. Some of them went the way of cowboys who inhabited them, like Tombstone, Arizona, only living on in playful and tourist guides. Others grew to become major cities like San Francisco, California, and Billings, Montana. But whether they survived the Wild West unscathed or rolled off into the sunset like a tumbleweed on the breeze, there were a lot of cities that help shaped what we know today as the Wild West. These were the places that were on the edge of the border where people were trying to create a living in some of the hardest Heck of a very different then, and so was America.If you have a passion for the history of the Wild West, let's see if you can place where some of the most significant cities from that time could have been on a map.
